Reclaiming the New Westminster Waterfront

Peter Hall, Simon Frasier University, Vancouver, B.C.

This research was supported by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.
Outline

• Port-cities and the problem of waterfront work

• New Westminster

• Reclaiming work on the waterfront
Vancouver ports’ 20 year container growth
Port-logistics employment in Metro Vancouver declined slightly and changed a lot between 1991 and 2006.
New Westminster portion of Fraser River, British Columbia, Canada
Reclaiming the New Westminster Waterfront PDG Structure: Current and Potential Future Partners/Contributors

PARTNER: New Westminster Museum and Archives

PARTNER: ILWU Local 502

PARTNER: ILWU Pensioners Organization

NEW WESTMINSTER:
- Public Library
- Planning Division
- Youth Committee

APPLICANT, 3 CO-APPLICANTS:
- SFU Urban Studies, History & Education

COLLABORATORS:
- 5 International and Canadian Academics

COLLABORATORS:
- NW community members

COLLABORATOR:
- NW Secondary School

COLLABORATOR:
- NW Home Learners Program

COLLABORATOR:
- NW Secondary School

COLLABORATOR:
- NW Home Learners Program

NEW WESTMINSTER SCHOOL DISTRICT

UNIONS:
- CMSG
- United Steel Teamsters
- CUPE
- UFCW
- NWDLC

WATERFRONT EMPLOYERS:
- Fraser-Surrey Docks
- Pacific Rim Stevedoring
- Paddlewheeler River Tours
- Valley Towing
- Sea Link Marine Services
- Fraser Shipyard & IC
- Southern Railway of B.C.
- Fraser River Pile & Dredge
- MV. Edgewater Fortune
- Port Metro Vancouver

COMMUNITY:
- Residents’ Associations
- Chamber of Commerce
- Hyack Festival Association

OTHER:
- Fraser River Discovery Center
- Pacific Northwest Labour History Association
- Columbia Institute and Columbia Foundation
- Real Estate Foundation of BC
Activities

• Year 1 (2012-13):
  • Website
  • Mapping the working waterfront
  • Oral history training and initial collection
  • Pilot projects in schools

• Year 2 (2013-14):
  • Documenting local perspectives
  • Oral history collection and analysis
  • Curriculum development and testing
  • Public lectures by Canadian and International academics

• Year 3 (2014-15):
  • Archiving
  • Museum exhibit and programming
  • Workshop, planning for future
(Re)Claiming the New Westminster Waterfront

In the past half-century, port cities all over the world have discovered that their once-industrial waterfronts are now attractive sites for recreation, commercial and residential development. Today, when we speak about the urban waterfront, most of us envision an aesthetically pleasing place of consumption rather than a place of work. But our new, urban waterfronts are still places of work – not necessarily the same kinds of work that was done in the past, but work nonetheless.

(Re)Claiming the New Westminster Waterfront, brings together a diverse set of community and Simon Fraser University partners to collect and share the stories of the people who worked on the waterfront in New Westminster. The Community Partners include the New Westminster Museum and Archives, the International Longshore and Warehouse Union Canada - Pensioners’ Organization and Local 502, as well as individuals from the local schools and the community.

Our understanding of history is incomplete without the experiences and perspectives of ordinary, working people. Too often ordinary citizens mistakenly feel that they have nothing special to contribute to our understanding of the past. Thus, community and SFU researchers are collecting the stories of workers on the New Westminster waterfront, with a special focus on the men and women who worked on the river and waterfront from the end of World War II till today. This period has been one of intense innovation in the transportation and other industries, and it is critical to capture the memories of workers who were part of it.
http://www.sfu.ca/waterfront.html

Thank you!

This research was supported by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.